Gary Oppenheimer, founder and executive director of AmpleHarvest.org will speak at the second annual TEDxManhattan “Changing the Way We Eat” in New York City on January 21 at the Times Center. This independently organized, one-day event licensed by TED aims to explore the issues, impacts and innovations happening in the US food system as we shift to a more sustainable way of eating and farming as well as to help create connections between different areas of the food movement. The Glynwood Institute for Sustainable Food and Farming is the lead sponsor for “Changing the Way We Eat.”

While more than 50 million Americans, including 1 in 4 children under the age of six, are food insecure, almost as many Americans grow food in home gardens – often more than they can use, preserve or give to friends. AmpleHarvest.org is a one of a kind solution to America’s hunger and nutrition crisis that uses the Internet to enable millions of home gardeners across all 50 states to easily find a nearby food pantry eager for their excess harvest. Gary will explore the scope and magnitude of hunger in America, how he came upon this solution and highlight the impact this two year old campaign has already had.

The day includes a world-class line-up of inspiring speakers from all disciplines of the sustainable food world, including

- Patty Cantrell, Organizer, Regional Food Solutions
- Dr. Mitchell Davis, Vice President, The James Beard Foundation
- Wenonah Hauter, Executive Director, Food & Water Watch
- Michelle Hughes, Director of GrowNYC’s New Farmer Development Project

About TEDx, x = independently organized event

In the spirit of ideas worth spreading, TEDx is a program of local, self-organized events that bring people together to share a TED-like experience. At a TEDx event, TEDTalks video and live speakers combine to spark deep discussion and connection in a small group. These local, self-organized events are branded TEDx, where x = independently organized TED event. The TED Conference provides general guidance for the TEDx program, but individual TEDx events are self-organized. TED is a nonprofit organization devoted to Ideas Worth Spreading. Started as a four-day conference in California 25 years ago, TED has grown to support those world-changing ideas with multiple initiatives.
