Home Gardeners vs Hunger in America

Millions of homeowners grow more food in their home gardens than they can possibly use, preserve or give to friends.

One out of six Americans needs food assistance, but their food pantry usually can't provide fresh produce.

The AmpleHarvest.org Campaign diminishes hunger in America by enabling you to share your excess garden produce with a neighborhood food pantry.

Please visit www.AmpleHarvest.org to find a food pantry near you.

Just because you are overwhelmed with your tomatoes, cucumbers, salad greens or herbs, your apple crop is enormous, the "red" peppers remained green or you got tired of beans doesn't mean they should be left in the garden to rot. If they are good enough for you to eat, they are good enough to share with neighbors in need.

Although times are tough, you can still help your community by reaching into your backyard instead of your back pocket.
